Dr. Reva Curry introduced Dr. Laura Dull, Professor of History, and Michele Pratt, Manager of Library Services and Programs. L. Dull and M. Pratt have been leading our Open Educational Resources (OER) efforts at the College.
Open Educational Resources (OER)

M. Pratt said that the OER movement started with community colleges. With OER, students save money. All students have access to the textbook from day one. Faculty can customize textbooks to only the content which focuses on the course outcomes and objectives.

M. Pratt said that OER continues to grow at Delta College and across the country. She noted that Lumen Learning has a $5 million grant to pursue OER development.

M. Pratt reviewed the activities that Delta College has hosted or participated in to encourage development of OER at the College. She said that Dr. Goodnow and Dr. Curry have been very supportive. Dr. Goodnow offered grants to faculty to encourage use of OER in their classrooms through the President’s Innovation Incubator program.

L. Dull said that this Friday there will be OER workshops for faculty. Delta’s librarians have curated resources for faculty.

With the availability of OER, to-date, Delta students have saved $441,500 (since 2016).

M. Benecke asked about required technology. The only technology required is an internet connection. Those students who wanted a printed copy can access the print on demand program at a low cost.

D. Middleton expressed gratitude to the presenters and to the faculty who are embracing OER in their classrooms.

D. Middleton also thanked Dr. Curry and Dr. Goodnow for their supportive leadership.
