Comment/Details about the method of assessment

Professors used individual assignments to assess how our students are evaluating conflicting historical interpretations. As this is a general history outcome, we assessed it across the board in all of our classes from as many professors as would participate. Professors used a range of formal and informal assessments to gauge how effectively our students are meeting the outcomes for our courses.

Result

(0) Results far below expectation/standard

Data Collection (general or specific stats regarding results)
90% of 133 students studied met expectations (75% or higher on assessment); 90% of students mastered the outcome (84% or higher); 10% of students didn’t meet expectations (74% or lower)

What We Learned (areas for improvements, strengths, etc.)
"Self-reflection • It's important to have students reflect their beliefs about civic engagement before they start the project and then reassess after. • Having students define and understand civic engagement before they began project led to better mastery of the outcome. • Providing defined list of events to research led to better mastery of outcome and reduced frustration of students, but list needs to be winnowed down further.

• Having librarian embedded in course and working with students throughout project led to better mastery of outcome. • Current project reduces financial burden on students, as well as time burden, from previous project where they were required to travel to places where various events occurred. • Some students found that the project reinforced to them that there is a great need to teach history at K-12 level. • Students also realized the importance of engaging in civic activities."

Use of Data to Improve Student Success
We will continue to assess to make improvements.
